AIRSHIP PIRATES

“Show me a man who grew up with a happy childhood, no blood or broken glass in his youth, and I will show you a man who likely has nothing to contribute to society. They are the same wounds that could turn a man into a villain, that instead may turn him into a hero, or an artist, or a leader. Scars add character.”

– Robert Brown, The Wrath of Fate

AIRSHIP PIRATE

Fire’s high and the airbags tight,
Food’s low but the skies are bright,
Props spinning all through the night,
We’re low on cash but we seen another target.

Goggles down, and the cannons up,
My blood starts pumping as I drain my cup,
I give the wheel a spin and I turn this girl around,
We’re way above ground but we’re closing on our target!

Flying jib is filled with air,
East India ships filled with despair,
We even up, her broadsides bare,
Our cannons flare but it’s just a show of muscle.

Steady on, she doesn’t need to burn,
She tries to fire and she tries to turn,
Grappling fire, we grab her hull,
We’re starting to roll, but we’ve got her on a leash!

Expendable crew starts to reel her in,
Our swords are sharpened and we’re ready to sin,
I’m three miles up, we’re about to swing aboard,
My tethers made of leather so I’m not about to fall here.

A swish of air and my boots hit deck,
No cash, no fuel, no – not a speck!
Grape shot’s made this bird a wreck,
And a glance below deck shows a crew of nuns and orphans!

*With a crew of drunken pilots, we’re the only Airship Pirates!
We’re full of hot air and we’re starting to rise,
We’re the terror of the skies, but a danger to ourselves.*

*With a crew of drunken pilots, we’re the only Airship Pirates!
We’re full of hot air and we’re starting to rise,
We’re the terror of the skies, but a danger to ourselves.*
